ABSTRACT

Since human resources (HR) are the primary asset in an organization, they must be managed and utilized in a balanced and humane manner. A private hospital is one of the health agencies owned by non-profit and private companies whose operational activities are financed through payments for medical services by the patients themselves, insurers or corporations, and foreign embassies. Siloam Hospital Bali is located at Jl. Sunset Road No. 818, Kuta, Kec. Kuta, Badung Regency, Bali, with a total of 73 employee respondents.

This study aims to determine the performance analysis based on key performance indicators (financial and profitability, customer satisfaction, internal processes, learning and growth, and employee performance). The study used secondary data that was obtained from Siloam Hospitals in Bali. The SPSS (Statistical Product and Service Solution) analysis techniques were used in research hypothesis testing.

The results showed that financial and profitability (X1), customer satisfaction (X2), internal processes (X3), and learning and growth (Y) both partially and simultaneously have a positive and significant effect on employee performance. It is hoped that in the next study other variables that affect employee performance can be investigated.

The conclusion in this study is that finance and profitability have a positive and significant effect on employee performance. Customer satisfaction has a positive and significant effect on employee performance. Internal processes have a positive and significant effect on employee performance. Learning and growth have a positive and significant effect on employee performance. Financial and profitability, customer satisfaction, internal processes, learning, and growth all have a significant positive impact on employee performance. This study suggests that services should adhere to the Standard Operating Procedure (SOP), that employees should respond quickly and responsively to patient complaints, that management should formulate the appropriate strategy, that competence should increase, that there should be opportunities for learning and growth through both formal and informal education, and that there should be stable pressure and employee health.
